Bad Kitty is back, and this time she's not happy. Her owner, Peter, has brought home a big bag of candy, and Bad Kitty wants no part of it. She sniffs at the candy, she paws at the candy, she even tries to bury the candy. But no matter what she does, Peter won't let her have any.

Bad Kitty is determined to get her paws on that candy, and she'll stop at nothing to do it. She tries to trick Peter by pretending to be sick. She tries to steal the candy while Peter is sleeping. She even tries to use her catnip mouse to distract Peter so she can make a run for the candy.

But no matter what Bad Kitty does, Peter is always one step ahead of her. He knows that Bad Kitty doesn't really like candy, and he's not going to let her get her paws on it.

In the end, Bad Kitty realizes that there are more important things in life than candy. She learns to appreciate the simple things, like spending time with her owner and playing with her catnip mouse.

Bad Kitty Does Not Like Candy is a hilarious and heartwarming story about a cat who learns to appreciate the simple things in life. Written by Nick Bruel, this book is perfect for children ages 3-7.
