A Symphony of Award-Winning Stories

The heart of this collection lies in three award-winning novellas: "The Ones Who Stay and Fight," "The City Born Great," and "Emergency Skin." Each novella is a standalone masterpiece, exploring profound themes with Jemisin's signature blend of imagination and social commentary.

In "The Ones Who Stay and Fight," we witness a future where technology has divided society into the Skinless and the Marked. Mia, a young woman grappling with her own identity, must confront the choices that will shape her destiny and the world around her.

"The City Born Great" transports us to a vibrant metropolis called New York City, where the line between reality and illusion blurs. Nnamdi, an artist and historian, unravels the hidden layers of the city's past and uncovers its true nature.

The titular novella, "Emergency Skin," paints a chilling picture of a world transformed by a virus that grants people the ability to change their appearance. In this society, the concept of race and identity becomes fluid and complex, forcing us to question the very nature of humanity.

Essays that Illuminate the Human Experience

Complementing the novellas are a series of thought-provoking essays that delve into Jemisin's creative process, her perspectives on race and identity, and the social issues she explores in her fiction.

In "On the Nature of Systems," Jemisin dissects the societal structures and power dynamics that often oppress marginalized communities. "The Ones Who Stay and Fight: A Personal Journey" offers a glimpse into the author's own experiences with race and identity, shedding light on the challenges and triumphs that shaped her writing.
