Carlos Lazo was born in Cuba in 1960, just one year after Fidel Castro came to power. Lazo's early childhood was marked by poverty and oppression. His father was a political prisoner, and his mother worked long hours to support the family.

In 1979, Lazo was given the opportunity to leave Cuba and come to the United States. He arrived in Miami with nothing but the clothes on his back. Lazo quickly learned English and enrolled in college. He went on to earn a degree in business administration and started his own successful company.

In 2012, Lazo was elected to the Florida Senate. He is the first Cuban-born refugee to serve in the U.S. Senate. Lazo is a strong advocate for education, economic opportunity, and social justice.

Lazo's story is an inspiring example of the American Dream. He overcame adversity to achieve success in business and politics. Lazo is a role model for all those who aspire to a better life.

From Castro Cuba to the Senate: One Man's Pursuit of the American Dream

Carlos Lazo's memoir is a powerful and inspiring story of overcoming adversity and achieving the American Dream. Lazo's story is a reminder that anything is possible with hard work and determination.

Lazo's memoir is divided into three parts. The first part tells the story of his childhood in Cuba and his escape to the United States. The second part describes his struggles and successes in the United States. The third part focuses on his political career and his work to improve the lives of others.

Lazo's writing is clear, concise, and engaging. He has a gift for storytelling, and his memoir is a page-turner. Lazo's memoir is a must-read for anyone interested in the American Dream, immigration, or politics.
