Question: What is the minimum following distance you should maintain from the vehicle in front of you?

Answer: At least 2 seconds

Explanation: The two-second rule is a simple way to determine a safe following distance. To use the two-second rule, pick a fixed object on the road ahead of you, such as a sign or a tree. When the vehicle in front of you passes the object, start counting. You should reach the object at least two seconds after the vehicle in front of you.
