Early Life and Family Background

Anne Frank was born in Frankfurt, Germany, on June 12, 1929, to Otto and Edith Frank. She had an older sister named Margot. The Frank family was Jewish, and Anne's father worked as a successful businessman. Anne enjoyed a happy and comfortable childhood, surrounded by loving family and friends.

However, the political climate in Germany began to change dramatically with the rise of the Nazi party. In 1933, Adolf Hitler became Chancellor of Germany, and the Nazi regime implemented increasingly repressive measures against Jewish people. As a result, the Frank family decided to flee Germany and seek refuge in the Netherlands.

Despite the hardships, Anne Frank found moments of joy and happiness within the confines of the secret annex. She developed close relationships with the other people in hiding, including the Van Pels family and Fritz Pfeffer. She also found solace in her writing and in her dreams of a better future.

Betrayal and Discovery

On August 4, 1944, the Frank family's hiding place was discovered by the Nazis. They were arrested and taken to a concentration camp.
