Synopsis

In the heart of a bustling metropolis, where power and ambition intertwine, lies a tale of forbidden desires and the corrosive effects of power. 'Too Close To The Sun' is a captivating novel that delves into the lives of two individuals whose destinies are inextricably linked.

Meet Eleanor Hamilton, a brilliant politician on the cusp of achieving her lifelong dream of becoming the city's mayor. Her unwavering determination and sharp intellect have earned her both respect and admiration. But as she ascends the political ladder, she encounters a temptation that threatens to derail her ambitions.

Enter Samuel Harrison, a charming and enigmatic artist whose forbidden desires ignite a passion within Eleanor that she never anticipated. Their secret affair becomes a dangerous obsession, threatening to unravel everything Eleanor has worked so hard to achieve. As their love deepens, so too does the web of lies and deceit that surrounds them.

In a world where power and morality collide, Eleanor must confront her own ambition and the allure of forbidden love. Will she succumb to the temptations that threaten her career and her very soul? Or will she find the strength to break free from the intoxicating grasp of the sun?
